Mardi Gras Dictionary

Boeuf Gras (French): The fatted calf, the ancient symbol of the last meat eaten before the Lenten season. A live version was presented in the Rex parade until 1909. Now the papier mâché version continues as one of Carnival's most recognizable symbols.

Doubloon: Aluminum coin-like objects bearing that krewe's insignia on one side and the parade's theme on the other.

Flambeaux (plural): Naphtha-fueled torches, traditionally carried by black men in white robes. In the 19th century flambeaux provided the only source of nighttime parade illumination. The first-ever all-female Mardi Gras flambeaux troupe made its debut in 2014.

King Cake: An oval, sugary pastry that contains a plastic hidden doll inside. The person who finds the doll is crowned 'king' and buys the next cake or throws the next party.

Krewe: The generic term for all Carnival organizations in New Orleans; first used by the Mistick Krewe of Comus in 1857, to give its club's name an Old English flavor.

Lundi Gras: French for Fat Monday. From 1874 to 1987, the day before Mardi Gras was celebrated by the arrival of Rex aboard a steamboat.

Mardi Gras: French for Fat Tuesday, the single day culmination of the Carnival season which annually begins January 6th.

Throws: Trinkets tossed from floats by costumed and masked krewe members.
